Will Secretary Knox issue an ultimatum to the young couple?

Georgewashingtonmorrow—apolo trouble for the owner of it, in Michigan, as in Vermont.

Having got her new "commissioner of public safety," Rutland probably feels as safe as Philadelphia does with hers.

"Simple, safe and interesting" foot ball is belittled by Coach Stagg of the university of Chicago to be possible. Unearth the brand, professor!

J. E. Weeks of Middlebury is being applauded for not running for governor of Vermont, but that applause does not necessarily mean a reflection on those who are running.

All the flood-gates of what New York wanted to say about Thomas C. Platt were raised by that person's death, and now look at the flood of words—damning words as a rule.

Young Philander C. Knox, a boy in school at Providence, has also been having experience in diplomacy during the past few days, while he made anxious inquiry after a marriage license.

Landgrave, Bennington county, denies it voted license, and its statement should be taken for its face value, reducing the license towns of Vermont to twenty-nine, or two more than during the preceding year.

Kansas City takes the center of the stage of the bloody tragedy. Heretofore, Kansas City has been considered as merely to do with the slaughtering of domestic animals. And now they have turned to cutting up human beings!

Writing a letter by telegraph is a novelty, and not such a costly novelty, either, provided the superfluous words of endorsement are left for pen and paper. In the business world, it ought to expedite matters very much and prove a distinct benefit.

Extreme luck continues to follow ship disasters. For the latest illustration, note the burning of the steamer Manhattan in Portland harbor yesterday, when nearly all the passengers had disembarked and the remainder, as well as the crew, found ready access to land, as soon as fire was discovered. It might have been a different story to tell, had the disaster occurred a few hours sooner, when the Manhattan was still at sea.

Commander Robert E. Peary having flatly refused to present his north pole proofs to Congress, because of the fact that previous contracts with publishers would be nullified, it leaves no course open to his friends at the present time, other than to withdraw their request for congressional reward to the explorer. Congress cannot, with self-respect, give reward of money or medal, after having been stood off by Peary to this extent. Probably the returns from his contracts with publishers are regarded more highly than the renown that might come to him through national recognition by Congress. If so, the country should be satisfied.

Burlington appears like a house divided against itself. Comes out The News last night and announces its support of Mead for governor of Vermont, although mindful of its "first duty" to support a Chittenden county candidate, but convinced there will be none; then the venerable Free Press this morning tells to its clientele that Chittenden county ought to send a delegation to the state convention pledged to support Charles P. Smith of Burlington. This The F. P. does without the knowledge of Mr. Smith, but it is actuated to it by a conviction that Vermont needs just such a man as the gentleman is. Now, which shall the waiting state of Vermont credit, the reluctant resignation of The News to the improbability of a Chittenden county candidate, or the half-assurance of The Free Press that Mr. Smith will yet become a candidate? We are in doubt, but there are no trumps.

THE COMING MORRILL ANNIVERSARY.

All Vermont can certainly join in doing honor to the late Senator Justin S. Morrill on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, which falls on April 14, 1910; and the entire country will find its interest directed more or less strongly toward this event, for Morrill was one of the nation's strong figures for a great many years, when membership in the United States Senate was confined less to the rich than it is at the present time. Morrill was a sturdy figure in the smaller house of the national assembly, honored, revered and looked up to as one of the "elder statesmen," of positive integrity and far-sighted for his country's good. It is a proud claim of Vermonters that he came from their state and that he represented their state so long in the larger councils of the United States; and therefore it is very fitting that this centennial of his birth should be set aside for public celebration through a memorial service to be held at the state capital, Vermont honors herself in thus paying tribute to one of her noble sons.

ORATORICAL CANDIDATES.

Possibly all the campaign speaking preliminary to the governorship nomination may not be done by F. O. Fleetwood. If Dr. Mead should take the notion to urge his claims from the platform and should give as good as account of himself as he is reported to have done in talking unpolitically to the Springfield farmers Thursday evening, the Lamontville speaker will have to look well to his laurels in his chosen diversion of oratory.—Rutland News.

If it should summer down to a question of oratorical ability, there would be no question whatever of the result. The present lieutenant governor's capability for public speaking is not to be compared with that of the gentleman from Morrisville; in fact, oratory is one of Mr. Fleetwood's strongest points. Compared to the latter's full-flowing tones, Dr. Mead's efforts are like the lisp of a child and colorless at that. The Rutland contemporary would better not match its man against his rival in the matter of public speaking; it would prove disastrous for Dr. Mead's campaign. He never has been considered an interesting speaker, let alone convincing.

Current Comment

Pronouncing Pinchot.
A reader in Williamstown, Vt., sends this inquiry: "As the name of Mr. Pinchot is likely to be before the public for some time to come, it would be convenient for those who have to speak the name to know what the correct pronunciation is. Will The Republican kindly inform us?" It can be stated on the best of authority that the proper pronunciation of Mr. Pinchot's name is "Pin-show."—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

"Copperheads!"
Here is the last paragraph of a characteristic communication from the well known John E. Harris, at Washington, to The Burlington Free Press: "Insurgents! reformers-within-the-party! copperheads! In the last analysis, as shown by the above party wreckers and destructionists! If for any reason we cannot stand for and with our party and render allegiance to the honorable leaders, who have so often led it to victory and are yet fighting its battles honestly and loyally, let us get out and call ourselves by some other name. Socialists, or even anarchists, if it is an honest allegiance, but don't retain the livery of the grand old party in which to serve its enemies! God and humanity hate a copperhead!" "Copperhead" is a pretty saucy term, John, and used to be a fighting word. Perhaps there are more copperheads in Vermont than there are regulars, if your definition is to be taken as the standard. Perhaps there are more "insurgents, reformers-within-the-party," copperheads" in either the first or second congressional district than there are thick-and-thinners and Cannon-Albion men.

The place to reform the Republican party, whatever and whenever it needs reform, is within the party, and it is the duty of all loyal Republicans to propose and influence such changes of principle and policy as they believe to be necessary to bring about necessary reforms from time to time. It may be, it probably is true that we are not always right in our judgment of what needs reforming and how it should be reformed. But it is none the less our duty as loyal party men that wish our party well to make protest of our opinions and efforts from time to time as an earnest of our patriotic regard for our country's welfare and as a manifestation of our abiding devotion to an instrument honestly designed to conserve it.

Copperhead! Yes, The Messenger is a copperhead, if your definition is correct, John. I sincerely believe the time is at hand when the Republican party has something to do to be saved, and that something must be done from the inside to save it, or it will be done from the outside and there will be no saving it.

It is this copperheadism, make the most of it.—St. Albans Messenger.

Jingles and Jests

March.
The whistled wind goes whizzing through the boughs,
And all afloat are fragrant flakes of snow;
The sunshine sizzles with delay,
And gorgeous gleams gleam out the light of day!
I wend would waddle through the where-less rain;
But scroopy snowflakes skeddoo to my brain!
That I stay home and penive penicillin's
grate,
While the March Hare sits mugging at my grate!

Mrs. Eleanor Rollins died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William H. Luby of East Montpelier. Mr. Worcester played the part of "Uncle Tom" in the first company which produced "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and Mr. Worcester appeared as "Topsy."
